15 COLD CALL BLOCKERS EVERY DUBAI REALTOR HEARS

AND HOW TO BOOK THE VISIT

What the prospect really means, what the book says to do, and the exact words to say, built on softness, echo and one options question that ends in a site visit.

THE REALTOR ONE

Invisible Habits. Visible Results.

BEFORE YOU DIAL

IT STARTS WITH WHAT YOU BELIEVE

“Cold calls don’t work in Dubai.” “People hate being called.” “Off-plan is too hard to sell on a call.” If you believe any of these, every script comes out apologetic, and the prospect hears it.

> “Cold calling is not a sales technique. It is a belief test. The phone rings. The prospect picks up. In the first three seconds, they can feel whether you need them or whether you are offering them something genuinely valuable.”
>
> — Realtor One, Ch.10

The goal of the call is not the sale. Nobody buys off-plan on a call. They buy a feeling and a reason to go and see it, so the goal of the call is the visit: a day and a time.

THEN IT’S HOW THEY HEAR YOU

They can’t see your smile, your office or your brand. They only hear your voice (Ch.11). Three pillars carry every script in this playbook:

01
SOFTNESS
“If I may…” before every question. It’s how they hear respect.

02
TONALITY
Slow down, drop your pitch, hold the pause, smile before you dial (Ch.11).

03
QUESTIONS
Answer, then end every answer with an options question.

THE PATTERN 1 SOFTEN → 2 ECHO THEIR PRIORITY → 3 OPTIONS QUESTION TOWARD THE VISIT → then stop talking.

The echoes in the scripts are sample dialogue, so use your prospect’s own words. Replace [Area] with your niche. No market statistics are quoted; off-plan facts appear only as the books state them.

BLOCKER 01 / 15

01

“I am not interested.”

Source: RO Ch.10, Handling the Most Common Objections on the Call

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

Usually not a verdict on the project. It is a reflex: “You sound like every other call I got today.” They haven’t heard anything specific to them yet.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Don’t plead. “Just hear me out for two minutes” pushes them away. Acknowledge it, say most people aren’t interested until they hear the specific advantage, then ask one quick question about their situation. If they answer, they are engaged.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“I totally understand. If I may ask you one quick question...”

02 ECHO

“You looked at Dubai property before, so I’m guessing the right opportunity still matters to you, even if this call didn’t.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, are you renting here right now, or do you already own in Dubai? Then I’ll know if a quick visit to the show apartment is even worth your time.”

DON’T SAY

~~“Just hear me out for two minutes...”~~

BLOCKER 02 / 15

02

“I don’t have time right now.”

Source: RO Ch.10, Handling the Most Common Objections on the Call

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

“You caught me at a bad moment, and I don’t know yet if this is worth making time for.”

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Don’t argue with their constraint (“It’ll only take five minutes, I promise!”). Acknowledge it, be specific about why you called, create intrigue (“I’m not even sure you’d be interested”), and give them control of the time.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“I hear you, most people are busy. If I may…”

02 ECHO

“That’s exactly why I’m being specific: one launch in [Area] that fits the payment plan and size you look for. I’m not even sure you’d be interested.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, is later today at 6 or tomorrow at 10 better for a 5-minute call, so we can see if a visit makes sense?”

DON’T SAY

~~“It’ll only take five minutes, I promise!”~~

BLOCKER 03 / 15

03

“Can you send me some options?”

Source: RO Ch.3, Order Taker or Consultant; Ch.14, Brave Question #6

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

“I don’t know exactly what I want yet, and I’m hoping you’ll make it easy.” They want fewer, better options, not more.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Order takers send twelve listings and get no reply. Consultants ask two quick questions first, then curate: is it to live in or for investment, and which area or view matters most?

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“Of course. Before I send you anything, if I may ask two quick questions, just so I save your time…”

02 ECHO

“You said you want something that works for the family and holds its value, so I’ll only send what fits that.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, is this for you to live in or for investment? And would Thursday evening or Saturday morning work to see the best two in person?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Sure! Here are 12 great options, let me know which you like.”~~

BLOCKER 04 / 15

04

“Just send me the details on WhatsApp.”

Source: RO Ch.10, Script #4 (the approval ask); Ch.9, Leak Two; Ch.12, Sin Six

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

Often a polite exit: “Send it so I can end this call.” Sometimes real interest, but with no reason yet to give you more time.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Send it, but never send information without first asking a qualifying question: answer a question with a question. Then send one document, with one sentence on why it matters to them, not five PDFs at once.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“Of course, I’ll send it now. If I may ask you something first…”

02 ECHO

“Just so I highlight what actually matters to you and don’t overload you with detail.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, is it the payment plan, the ROI or the unit size that matters most? And once you’ve seen it, is Thursday evening or Saturday morning better to see the show apartment?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Sure!” …then the brochure, payment plan, floor plan and masterplan in one message.~~

BLOCKER 05 / 15

05

“I want to think about it.”

Source: RO Ch.10, Handling the Most Common Objections; Ch.14, Brave Question #1

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

Something is unresolved, and often it isn’t said: “I need to check with my wife” or “I need to check my financing.”

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Don’t dismiss it (“What’s there to think about?”). Agree it’s smart, then ask what specifically they want to think through. You can probably answer it now, and you’ll find the real objection.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“Absolutely, that’s a smart approach. If I may ask…”

02 ECHO

“Most of my serious buyers think before deciding, and you told me the payment plan has to fit comfortably.”

“If I may ask, is it the project itself, the timing or the numbers you want to think through? Seeing it often answers that, so would Thursday or Saturday suit you better?”

DON’T SAY

~~“What’s there to think about? This is a great deal!”~~

BLOCKER 06 / 15

06

“The price is too high.”

Source: RO Ch.10, Handling the Most Common Objections; Ch.14, Brave Question #5

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

Either it’s above their budget, or they don’t yet see the value. These are two different conversations.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Don’t defend the price (“Actually, the price is fair based on recent comps…”). Ask what range they were thinking, and whether it’s high relative to the budget or to what they think the unit is worth.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“Fair point. If I may ask you something…”

02 ECHO

“You told me you want to enter in stages rather than pay everything at once.”

“If I may ask, is it high relative to your budget, or relative to what you think it’s worth? If it’s the budget, shall we look at a smaller unit in the same project on Thursday or Saturday?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Actually, the price is fair based on recent comps…”~~

07

“I know someone who can do it cheaper.”

Source: RO Ch.10, Handling the Most Common Objections; Ch.8 (the cashback client)

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

“Price is the only thing I can compare right now.” Sometimes it’s a negotiating signal, like the client who mentions another agent’s cashback.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Don’t start a price war (“Well, our service is better because…”). Say having options is smart, then ask what matters most: the lowest price, or the best outcome with zero headaches.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“Great, having options is smart. If I may ask you something…”

02 ECHO

“Price is one factor, but you also told me you want this done cleanly and quickly.”

“If I may ask, what matters most to you: the lowest possible cost, or the best outcome with zero headaches? If it’s the outcome, shall I show you Thursday evening or Saturday morning?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Well, our service is better because…”~~

08

“I’ve been speaking to a few other agents.”

Source: RO Ch.15, Be the Doctor, Not the Salesman (The Second Opinion Trap); Ch.8, client sort question 4

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

Either they really are shopping, or it’s a negotiating signal. Both are useful information, not a threat.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Don’t drop commission, make promises or criticise the other agents. Validate them, then ask what the others are showing them and whether anything they offer hasn’t been addressed yet.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“That’s smart, you should speak to a few people on a decision this large. If I may ask…”

02 ECHO

“You told me the developer’s track record matters most to you.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, what are the other agents showing you, and is there anything I haven’t covered yet? I’d be glad to show you this one side by side, Thursday or Saturday?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Those agents don’t know this area like I do.”~~

BLOCKER 09 / 15

09

“I need to check with my wife.”

Source: RO Ch.10 (the real objection behind “think about it”); Ch.16, Objection Four; Ch.14, Brave Question #4

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

Either the family genuinely hasn’t been consulted, or family is a comfortable exit from a decision they aren’t sure about.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Separate the two problems: has the family not seen it yet, or is there a specific concern from their side? If they haven’t seen it, offer a call or a visit together.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“Of course, it’s a family decision. If I may ask you something...”

02 ECHO

“You told me your wife wants a safe community and room for the children.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, is it that she hasn’t seen it yet, or is there a specific concern I can help with? Would Thursday evening or Saturday morning suit you both to see it together?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Sure, let me know what she says.”~~

BLOCKER 10 / 15

10

“I need to check my financing.”

Source: RO Ch.10 (the real objection behind “think about it”); Ch.17, Mechanic Two

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

“I’m not sure I can afford this, or how the payments would work.”

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Now you know the real objection, so address that one. The book describes off-plan payment plans as typically 10%–20% on booking, staged construction payments, and the balance on handover, with some developers offering post-handover plans. Walk through it in dirhams for their budget, not percentages.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“That makes complete sense. If I may ask you something…”

02 ECHO

“You told me you’d rather pay in stages than all at once.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, would it help to see the payment schedule in dirhams for your budget first, or to walk through it at the sales centre on Saturday?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Don’t worry about the financing, it’s easy.”~~

BLOCKER 11 / 15

“I want to wait and see how the market moves.”

Source: RO Ch.16, Objection Three; Ch.14, Brave Question #8; Ch.6, Cost of Waiting

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

“I am afraid of making the wrong decision.” Market uncertainty is a socially acceptable way to avoid committing.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Don’t contradict without evidence (“The market is doing really well!”). Do the math transparently for both scenarios, using real data for their unit, then hand the decision back: “What does your gut say?”

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“That’s a reasonable instinct. If I may ask you something...”

02 ECHO

“You told me you don’t want to keep paying rent while you wait.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, would it help to see what waiting could cost for this unit before you decide, either on a call tonight or when we visit on Saturday?”

DON’T SAY

~~“The market is actually doing really well right now, this is a great time to buy!”~~

BLOCKER 12 / 15

12

“What if the developer doesn’t deliver?”

Source: RO Ch.17, Off-Plan: the Developer Guarantee

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

A legitimate fear about off-plan risk. It deserves a legitimate answer, not a dismissal.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Answer with evidence, not reassurance. The book explains that RERA requires off-plan buyer payments to be held in escrow and released only as construction milestones are verified, and says to know this developer’s specific delivery track record.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“That’s a very fair concern, and exactly the right question to ask. If I may…”

02 ECHO

“You told me the safety of your money matters most to you.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, would it help to see this developer’s completed projects first, or to visit the sales centre and go through the escrow on Thursday or Saturday?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Don’t worry, they always deliver.”~~

BLOCKER 13 / 15

13

“Off-plan is just a picture. I want to see it built.”

Source: Adapted from RO Ch.17 (off-plan is “sold on a floor plan, a render, and a developer’s promise”; the wrong off-plan buyer “prefers something they can see”)

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

“I can’t picture it, so I can’t trust it.” Sometimes it also means off-plan isn’t right for them, and that’s fine.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Start with the vision: the community, not the unit. Show one completed project by the same developer, promise versus delivery. And qualify honestly: a buyer who needs to move in within six months is a secondary buyer.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“I understand, it’s hard to buy what you can’t see yet. If I may ask…”

02 ECHO

“You told me you’re thinking two to three years ahead, not moving next month.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, would it help more to walk the show apartment, or to see a finished project by the same developer? Thursday evening or Saturday morning?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Trust me, it’ll look exactly like the render.”~~

BLOCKER 14 / 15

14

“I’m not sure about Dubai right now.”

Source: RO Ch.6, Why Dubai. Why You? Why Now? (“If not Dubai, then where?”)

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

“I’m nervous about putting money here, but I haven’t compared it to my alternatives.”

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Acknowledge the hesitation, then ask one question: “If not Dubai, then where are you considering putting this capital?” and stop talking. The buyer has to confront the alternatives themselves.

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“I completely understand the hesitation. If I may ask you something…”

02 ECHO

“You told me you want an asset that works for you while you keep your options open.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, if not Dubai, then where are you considering putting this capital? And would it help to see one project in person, Thursday or Saturday, before you decide?”

DON’T SAY

~~“Dubai is the best market in the world, you can’t go wrong.”~~

BLOCKER 15 / 15

15

“I’m just browsing.”

Source: WD Ch.3, The Anatomy of Buyer Disappearance (Reason 08: curious, not committed); WD Ch.5, V.I.E.W. Validate

WHAT THEY REALLY MEAN

Some buyers really are just gathering information. That’s fine, unless you invest days of time without ever qualifying it.

THE BOOK’S APPROACH

Qualify with respect, early: what made you start looking now, specifically, and if we found the right property, what would need to happen for you to move forward?

SAY THIS

01 SOFTEN

“That’s perfectly fine, it’s the smart way to start. If I may ask…”

02 ECHO

“You’re browsing now, so something must have made you start looking.”

03 OPTIONS QUESTION → THE VISIT

“If I may ask, what made you start looking now, specifically? If it’s worth a closer look, is Thursday evening or Saturday morning easier for a quick visit?”

DON’T SAY

~~“No problem, I’ll add you to my broadcast list.”~~
